Hello Everyone,

I wanted to share this resource from our partner Brittany Bare and her My Life, My Stories project for a very interesting webinar coming up on Thursday, April 23. Some of you may know Brittany for her work with us in helping people record their memories and memoirs in our West Wing recording booth. A very heartfelt and valuable project.

Below is her description of the web event and a link to register. Please consider this interesting opportunity!

Thank you,
Frank

Please join My Life, My Stories for our first-ever virtual intergenerational event! The theme will be around loneliness and how it affects the youngest and oldest generations in our community.

During this unprecedented time when everyone is required to self-isolate, can we identify shared experiences and emotions across generations? How has self-isolation affected your perspective on loneliness? Do you think the effects of coronavirus will positively or negatively impact how our society approaches loneliness? Are the causes of loneliness different between young adults and seniors? How can we create intergenerational connections during and after the coronavirus pandemic?

We will have volunteers of different generations share their personal stories and then we'll will breakout into small intergenerational groups to discuss our unique experiences and relationship with loneliness. Free and no Zoom experience required.
